Copenhagen Airports A/S and Swedavia sign contract for flight calibration services

Copenhagen Airports A/S recently signed a contract for flight calibration services with Swedish-owned company Swedavia.

The Danish Civil Aviation Administration (CAA) announced in April 2000 that it would be discontinuing flight calibration services of Danish landing facilities and navigational systems. As a result, it was up to each individual airport to find a CAA-approved business partner to carry out these flight calibration services.

Swedavia was awarded the contract to provide flight calibration services following a call for tenders in the EU from Copenhagen Airports A/S, Naviair and the other Danish airports.

Owned by Luftfartsverket, Swedavia also makes flight calibration services at several Swedish airports, including Arlanda. Swedavia will begin making flights inspections on 1 April 2002.
